IN THE UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

The University of St. Michael's College was founded in 1852 by the Basilian Fathers and became a federated college with the University of Toronto in 1910. St. Michael's prides itself on fostering a diverse and inclusive community, providing students with a transformative educational experience, and maintaining a deep commitment to sustainability and social justice. By coming to St. Michael's, you will experience everything the University of Toronto has to offer, in addition to the many cultural, athletic, spiritual, and extracurricular activities that the College provides to enhance your academic career and prepare you for success throughout your life.

St. Michael's hosts undergraduate programs that draw from its historic strengths in Book and Media Studies, Celtic Studies, Christianity and Culture, and Mediaeval Studies, and provides three popular SMC One Seminar programs: the Gilson Seminar in Faith and Ideas, the Boyle Seminar in Scripts and Stories and the McLuhan Seminar in Creativity and Technology. The College also offers exceptional support and student services that include academic success learning strategists, career educators, and a wellness counsellor. Additional supports are available through the John M. Kelly Library, the second busiest library on the University of Toronto's campus.

St. Michael's is home to a vibrant and engaged student community. Throughout the academic year, student clubs enrich the community of the College by organizing and hosting a range of activities including intramural sports, theatre productions, concerts, forums on social issues as well as making volunteer opportunities available.

St. Michael's was the institutional home of legendary media theorist Marshall McLuhan, and other famous St. Michael's scholars include medievalist Etienne Gilson and French Catholic philosopher Jacques Maritain. Its alumni community includes notable Canadians such as former Prime Minister of Canada Paul Martin, current Minister of Infrastructure and Communities Honourable Catherine McKenna and CEO at Sunnybrook Health Sciences Centre Dr. Andy Smith.
